Use of web-enabled devices and/or devices with computer functionalities during examinations

Effective immediately, according to a resolution by the 58th joint session of the Examination Committees for the Bachelor's program in Business Administration, the Bachelor's program in International Business Administration, and the Master's program in Business Administration at the Ingolstadt School of Management, the use of web-enabled devices during examinations will be considered cheating unless this was explicitly approved as assistive technology by the responsible examiner. In addition, the use of devices that have computer functionalities and/or can provide information will be considered cheating during examinations. This particularly includes smart watches.
