About

The Catholic University of Eichstätt- Ingolstadt, in cooperation with the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., offers a one-week Migration Studies Summer Academy from July 29 to August 3, 2019 in Eichstätt, Germany. The subject „Origin – Transit – Destination – Future“ will be discussed in this Summer Academy. Furthermore, students from both catholic universities have the opportunity to deal with theories and methods, chances and challenges related to flight and migration.

We expect an intensive exchange with declared experts in interdisciplinary research of flight and migration. A central item of the agenda will be the development of a research draft within small study groups. The research drafts will be presented at the end of the Summer Academy and should clearly refer to one of the four topics mentioned above.

The focus is placed on many areas such as politics, law, language, media, religion and church analyzed from various disciplinary angles (e.g. psychology, history, social work, philosophy, political science, law, sociology and theology).

This program aims at master's degree students in different fields.

Official Welcome

Dear participants of the Migration Studies Summer Academy,

In the name of the Presidium and the entire University community, I am delighted to warmly welcome you at the Catholic University of Eichstätt-Ingolstadt (KU). A university's character is formed by the people who study, teach and work at it. Welcoming guests at the KU on the occasion of the Migration Studies Summer Academy (MSSA) is also a great benefit to us.

The KU as the only Catholic university in Germany is based on the Christian view of human life: The University's focus is on the person. This is why we attach particular importance not only to providing our students with excellent education, but also to encourage and support young people in their personal development and impart social skills. University life at the KU is shaped by open dialog and critical thinking. The fact that we are among the smaller universities in Germany ensures that our students can study and learn in a friendly atmosphere. They benefit from personal supervision, an interdisciplinary study offer, excellent facilities, outstanding research and a global network of more than 280 partner universities.

Our distinctive profile has inspired us to become active in the field of "flight and migration" for some time now which also includes close cooperation with society. Our students' outstanding commitment towards working with refugees was another driving force. Carrying out research in the field of flight and migration is not our only objective – the KU also attaches great importance to the academic work with and for refugees. The area of flight and migration is no temporary phenomenon but rather a topic which challenges the world to act. We need a substantiated basis in order to be able to develop regional and international strategies.

The Migration Studies Summer Academy is a joint project of the KU and the Catholic University of America (CUA), one of our closest international partners. Like the KU, the CUA is a leading university in many fields. We are thankful for the good preparation of the MSSA in both institutions and look forward to deepening our long and productive relationship.

I am convinced that the following week at the KU will offer new perspectives on issues surrounding flight and migration for all of us. I wish you an enlightening and pleasant stay at the KU.

(Vice president for international affairs and profile development)

Course Content

Concept

The Migration Studies Summer Academy (MSSA) is a one-week program designed to advance research on migration studies through the development of international collaborations and expertise among faculty and graduate students.

The program will include lectures from experts from Katholische Universität Eichstätt-Ingolstadt (KU), The Catholic University of America (CUA), and other leading institutions across the following fields: Migration Studies, Psychology, Education, History, Social Work, Philosophy, Political Science, Law, Sociology, and Theology. To supplement the lectures, the MSSA will also include local field trips.

In addition, students will work together in teams to develop research proposals and reviews based on one of four migratory themes described by Pope Francis: origin, transit, destination, and future. The MSSA will be grounded in both components of 2241 of the Catechism of the Catholic Church.

Concurrently, the faculty will develop long-term international collaborations. Students and faculty will present their work at the end of the academy.

A total of 15 exhibition stations feature objects that represent the past and the present of migration in Munich and invite visitors to adopt a new perspective. In addition, each of these stops has a tablet so that visitors can interact with additional objects and digital content related to that particular station. The exhibition texts and the additional interactive material have been translated into English and Modern Standard Arabic with a view to reaching the widest possible audience. Visitors can also use two participative modules to help put together their own collections on Munich’s history of migration and join the debate on how the city should now start to view itself.

Free Time in Munich

The following describes a walking tour through Munich City. You can walk this tour during your free time in Munich, if you would like to.

Stachus

Stachus is the Munich intern name for the Karlsplatz. Back in 1755, there was a popular restaurant called Stachusgarten. In the 18th century this square was presumed to be the busiest square in Europe. Officially, the Karlsplatz was named after Karl Theodor who was the electoral prince of Bavaria in the 1800s.

Frauenkirche/Teufelstritt

The Frauenkirche is an important church in Munich. There are several tales concerning the footprint near the entrance of the church. One of them is about the master builder Jörg Ganghofer and the devil. Ganghofer asked the devil to help him build a new church in Munich, in exchange the devil will get the soul of the first person entering the church. After the church was finished many people came to see it and so did the devil in order to demand his pay. Ganghofer refused to give him the first soul because the devil forgot to build the windows of the church. From the point of where the devil stood the church did not look like it had windows. The devil was furious and stamped his foot into the ground leaving a footprint.

Marienplatz

Marienplatz is the central square in Munich, in the middle you can see a golden statue of Virgin Mary, which was erected by electoral prince Maximilian the 1st after Munich was spared during the Thirty Years' War. The New Town Hall is located at the northern part of Marienplatz. The 100-meter-long façade is richly decorated and shows statutes of Bavarian royalty as well as masks and grimaces which are based on folk legends. The tower is crowned by the Münchner Kindl, which is the name of the symbol on the coat of the city of Munich. The mechanical clock plays different melodies to which different figures dance. The figures on the bottom represent the Schäfflertanz, a traditional Bavarian dance and the figures at the top represent a knight's tournament.

Free Time in Munich

Fischbrunnen

The Fischbrunnen is a fountain next to Munich's town hall. Starting in the 18th century butcher's apprentices jumped into the fountain when receiving their journeyman letter after successfully completing their apprenticeship. This tradition is called Metzgersprung (butcher jump) and was seen as a freeing from youthful sins. After the apprentices jumped, they came back up and threw apples, nuts and coins among the spectators. This tradition is maintained until today and it takes place every three years.

Viktualienmarkt and Heilig Geist Spital

The Viktualienmarkt is a daily food market. Next to Viktualienmarkt used to be the Heilig Geist Spital which was a charitable facility for the sick and elderly founded in 1208. The Wadler Family, who have gained prosperity through salt trade, decided 1318 to donate to the Heilig Geist Spital. Once a year all the people of Munich should benefit of their generosity which is why they hired the Brezenreiter (a man riding on a horse). He rode through town giving away free Brezen (pretzels) donated by the family. This tradition lasted about 500 years but was later prohibited because the people of Munich started fighting about the Brezen.

Drückebergergasse

Drückebergergasse (English "Shirker's Alley") is a popular name for the Viscardigasse, which is a small pedestrian street. People in Munich started using the name Drückebergergasse in the 1930s. Locals used this street to avoid the nearby Nazi memorial. This way they avoided the requirement to perform the Hitler salute to the memorial. In order to remember this, a trail of golden paving stones was built.

Odeonsplatz and the Lion

The Odeonsplatz is a square developed by Leo von Klenze. Many important buildings surround the Odeonsplatz: the Munich Residence (former royal palace), the Theatine Church and the Feldherrenhalle (monument to honor the Bavarian Army). Touching the lion's snout in front of the Munich Residence brings good luck. This tradition goes back to the 19th century when a student got into a fight with King Ludwig I. The student wrote hate mail about the King and got caught. The King surprisingly reprieved the student and gifted him a bag full of money. After leaving the Munich Residence, he leaned against the lion to collect himself. Ever since then people believe that the lion brings good luck and wealth.

Free Time in Eichstätt

Even though Eichstätt has only 13.500 habitants this little town has a lot to offer – especially in summer. We want to give you some ideas how and where you could spend your free time.

Open-air pool

The best way to spend a free and hot afternoon in Eichstätt is to go to the Freibad. It is a public swimming pool which you can enter the whole day. Do not forget to bring your student-ID so the entry gets cheaper.

There are not only swimming pools but beach volleyball courts, table-tennis-tables and a lot of space to tan. You will probably meet many other KU students there, laying in the sun and relax.

Opening hours are from 08.00 h – 20.00 h and the entry costs 3,80€ (regular price) and 2,20€ for students.

Free Time in Eichstätt

Theke

If you are keen on spending an evening out, we highly recommend the local students' pub called "Theke". It is a pub run by the Catholic University Community (German: KHG), only KU students work there and the prices for drinks are lower than in other bars. The "Theke" is a popular meeting point for having a beer, playing dart or other games and chat a little bit with your fellow students. In summer you can also enjoy your evening in the little garden in front of the "Theke". Furthermore, many parties are hosted there – so stay tuned about the events that will be taking place there.

Opening hours:

Monday – Sunday 20.00h – 01.00h

Canoeing

One of the most popular things to do in Eichstätt is to go canoeing. With the Altmühl flowing through Eichstätt you have a great opportunity to try this sport. You can rent a canoe for a day or book a multiple day trip at one of the suppliers.
