Patrizia Hartmann currently coordinates the area of sustainability at Catholic University of Eichstätt Ingolstadt. Among other projects, Ms Hartmann manages the university's Green Office, which serves as a hub for KU's sustainability activities. This is where sustainability measures are managed and committed KU members as well as the population of Eichstätt and Ingolstadt are networked.

Inside of Green Office, students can network with other committed people, support KU projects, receive information, tackle new sustainability projects and much more. Ms Hartmann is also in charge of the Certificate Programme 'Sustainable Development', which enables all students to deal with future issues of sustainable development in depth during their studies at KU. Participants acquire knowledge and important skills for their future work and for helping to shape sustainable development.

Furthermore, Ms Hartmann is involved in the development of further education in the field of sustainability within the framework of the funding project 'Mensch in Bewegung'. She is also engaged in the area of science communication.

Ms Hartmann gained her master's degree in Economic and Social Geography from Leipzig University.
