

Guest students

The University's offer for individual professional development and the possibility of broadening your knowledge without examination stress or pressure to perform is very well received especially by senior citizens but also by the working population or re-entrants.

Generally, all courses are open to guest students, however, regular students have priority in courses with a restricted number of participants. For participation in language courses and degree programs with admission restrictions, guest students must obtain the Language Center's or dean's prior written approval (see application form).

Classical humanities such as history, classical archeology, art history, philosophy or foreign languages are especially popular.
